Introduction

A Gunboat game is one where each player plays two or three nations (chosen from pre-paired nations), and there is no communication allowed.

Any modifications to the following rules for a specific game can be found in the main body of the email containing your turn. PLEASE always check for any changes to the basic rules covered here.

Neutral nations are pre-aligned (they begin the game either on the side of the Free Peoples or the Dark Servants). One of the Neutral nations is not played to ensure an even number of nations on each side at the start of the game. Its population centres, armies and characters are removed from the game, and any artefacts it might have are dropped at random locations on the map.

This document details the normal (basic) Gunboat rules. However, these are subject to change for specific games, so before playing, please check for any special alterations to the rules.

With the exception of rules detailed either in this document or in the specific variants for a given game, the rules used are those for the normal Middle-earth PBM game, as found in the Middle-earth Guide (available on request or from our website: www.middleearthgames.com)

Nation Duos

Nation Duos (also known as pairings) are the pre-paired nations available to play.

Splitting a Duo or Trio

If you only wish to play one nation, you may choose to start up with another player or two players as a team, with each of you playing one nation.

Joining A Game

To join a game, send us at least three Duos or Trios that you are willing to play, in order of preference. When the game is full, we will then allocate you a Duo or Trio to play. You will usually be able to play your first or second choice.

Neutral Nations

Starting Allegiances in 1650

Dark Servants: Corsairs and Rhudaur
Free People: Harad and Dunlendings
Not played: Easterlings

Starting Allegiances in 2950

Dark Servants: Corsairs and the Khand Easterlings
Free People: Dunlendings and the White Wizard
Not Played: Rhun Easterlings

Starting Allegiances in Kin-stripe

Not Played: Khazad, Tirkhor

Nation Relations

Your relations to other nations should have been altered as appropriate (nations on your side should be Tolerated, nations on the opposing side should be Disliked). However, please check these, and if there are any errors, let us know.

Offensive Actions Against Characters

Your Own Nations

You can take any actions you wish against characters of your own nations.

Characters At Your Population Centres

You are permitted to take offensive actions against unknown characters at your own population centres.

Characters At Other Locations

You may not take offensive actions against unknown characters, or characters of nations on your team being run by other players, at population centres which you do not own or who are not at population centres. Offensive actions include but are not limited to doubling, influencing, stealing, sabotaging, cursing, etc. If you are unsure whether something is permitted, please ask us before attempting it.

Characters from Dead Nations

If you know for certain that a nation on your team is dead, you may challenge or assassinate their characters in order to gain their artefacts, even if they are not on your population centre.

Doubling

In line with the above, doubling is permitted on any enemy character, or character belonging to your other nation/s. But you may not double characters that you know belong to nations of your allegiance run by other players.

Offensive Actions Against Allies

You may not take offensive actions against known allied armies, characters or population centres of nations on your team being run by other players. Offensive actions include but are not limited to doubling, influencing, stealing, sabotaging, cursing, etc. If you are unsure whether something is permitted, please ask us before attempting it.

Offensive Actions Against Your Own Nations

You can take any actions you wish against your own nation/s.

Nation Lists

Every 3 turns (or whenever we get the chance) we will update the lists of nation Duos, dead nations, etc., that are made available. Inactive nations will, by default, be revealed, but not specifically mentioned. If you think we have made an error, or forgotten to update the lists, please remind us!.

Dropped Nations

A player cannot normally run more than two nations in a 2-nation game, or three nations in a 3-nation game. If a nation or nations become available due to a player dropping, we will first attempt to find a player to take them over who is not currently playing in the game, before, if necessary, splitting up the nations and offering them singularly to existing players within the game. The following, then, is the full procedure in the event of a player dropping:

Multiple Nations

1. The nations will be advertised as available to all our players.
2. If no one who is not already playing the game is interested in taking them over, the nations will be split, and offered individually to any players on the same team who do not have 2/3 nations.
3. If we still can't find a player to take them up, then we reserve the right to offer them to the players on the team who already have 2/3 nations, whilst keeping the balance of the game as best we can. If this results in a single player running all remaining nations in a Kin-strife game, or at least half of the remaining nations in a 1650, 2950 or Fourth-age game, opponents are informed, and are then allowed to communicate as they would in a normal game.

Single Nations

1. The nation is offered to other players on the same team who only have one nation.
2. If no one on the team is interested in playing the nation, it will be advertised as available to all our players.
4. If we still can't find a player to take over the nation, we reserve the right to offer it to the players who already have 2/3 nations, whilst keeping the balance of the game as best we can. If this results in a single player running all remaining nations in a Kin-strife game, or at least half of the remaining nations in a 1650, 2950 or Fourth-age game, opponents are informed, and are then allowed to communicate as they would in a normal game.

Offering a Position

When a nation or nations become available, only the fact that a nation is available is first made known, not which nation. However, soon after that, or if that information is key to picking up the nation, the nation ID will be revealed. Where more than one player is interested in a position, we will seek to keep strong combinations of players apart, in order to ensure as challenging and even a game as possible.

Shadow Orders

Obviously team mates cannot submit shadow orders in Gunboat games. Instead, if we do not receive orders from a player by the end of the day that the game is due to run, then the following day we (the GMs) will write basic shadow orders and use those to run the game. The player will be charged for these at normal turn cost.

Game End

In addition to the usual ways in which a game can be won, a Gunboat game can also end in one of the following three ways:

Vote

Any player may request that their team vote on whether or not to concede the game. This is done by emailing us with a request to hold a vote. Votes are confidential (including which player requested the vote), and are organised by ourselves. A vote can only take place a maximum of once every five turns (i.e. once during turns 1-5, once during turns 6-10, etc.).

When a vote occurs, you have three options:

- 1) You can vote to CONTINUE.
- 2) You can vote to CONCEDE.
- 3) Or, if you intend to drop your position/s regardless of the vote's result, you can DROP. In this case your nation/s are dropped before the vote and offered to your allies, so that they have the option of playing on should the game continue. There is no penalty for dropping in this way. (This option is intended to stop players asking for a vote, then dropping if the vote is to continue, which is disruptive to their allies.)

The voting deadline must be strictly adhered to. If you miss that deadline, you are considered to have voted to continue. However, we reserve the right to extend the deadline if a player votes to drop, so that we can offer those nations to allies.

Each surviving nation on the team gets one vote, and if 2/3 or more of the surviving nations on the team vote to concede, the game ends.

The opposing team is not informed that a vote is taking place unless the result of the vote is to concede, at which point all players are notified, the final turn is run, and the game is concluded.

Nation Advantage

If there is at any time there is a greater than 3:1 ratio of surviving nations on a particular allegiance, the game ends automatically with victory going to the allegiance with the greater number of nations. All players are notified, and turns will be run to end the game immediately.

After 50 Turns

After 50 turns (or 52 turns in a Fourth Age game) the game ends, and the allegiance with the most combined victory points wins.

If, however, the victory points of both allegiances are within 10% of each other, the game is considered a draw.

Communication

Almost no diplomacy is allowed in Gunboat games.

The only communication allowed between players of the same allegiance is a short diplomatic message, which should either be sent via us to all members of your team on certain specified turns, or via Discord if it is a 'Discord Diplomacy' variant (you will be informed of this at game start).

You will be told on which turns you are allowed to send diplos. For example, on turns 6/11/16/21, etc.

The message is limited to 50 words in 2 nation games, and 75 words in 3 nation games.

Hexes are one word, "Dark Lieutenant" and "Major Town" are each considered to be one word. "It's" is two words. If in doubt, please ask us to clarify.

An important exception is when, as a result of players dropping, one player ends up running all remaining nations on a side in a Kin-strife game, or at least half the remaining nations in a 1650, 2950 or Fourth-age game. In this case, the opposing side will be informed, and can then communicate without restrictions, and will gain access to their allies' results.

To send a diplo, email us in the following format:

Subject line: ME Game 77 Diplo for FPs.

Email body:

START

Dwarves need gold at 2004, under heavy attack. Quiet Avenger stealing gold from Iron hills.

END

No form of contact at all is permitted with players of other allegiances.

Information gathering

Techniques Permitted

Information from 925 orders, Lore spells, etc.

Transfer of products/gold from your nation to other nations in the game.

Any actions against your second nation from your first nation (or vice versa!).

Techniques Not Permitted

Information transfer of any kind. For example, transferring 23 gold to suggest an attack on nation 23, or 3221 gold to request an attack on a population centre at 3221. The essence of a Gunboat game is little or no communication, so any attempt against the spirit of this is strictly prohibited.

Trust

Gunboat games require an element of trust, both between us and yourselves, and between players. The essence of the game lies in the lack of communication, and we trust you not to seek to abuse this rule. If in doubt as to whether something is permitted, please contact us to ask before attempting it.
